Owner Moxie by Mercy Licensed Esthetician & Spray Tan Artist

For those who know me, Hey you! And for those who don't... let me introduce myself.

My name is Mercy and I'm an Esthetician, Science Nerd, Personal Cheerleader, Skincare Wizard, Small Business Owner and more! I own Moxie By Mercy, a facial focused skincare spa that provides vintage inspired, custom, and bespoke services. As an esthetician, my goal is to increase your personal confidence, self-love, and overall skin health. I like to sum up all of these with one word, the pinnacle of my business: Moxie. Formal definition: Force of character, determination, or verve. Informally: "The It Factor". That's what my clients rediscover in themselves after they've received a service from me.

To make a long story short, I got into esthetics because I, myself, struggled with chronic barrier impairment, sensitive, painful skin that was eczema prone and a huge insecurity of mine. I was a long-time beauty industry consumer before I realized I actually wanted to become an esthetician! In school, I really fell in love with skincare and facials because of 2 major components.

1. Skincare is scientifically backed.
 2. All humans need other humans. We need physical touch, we need community, and we need someone to listen and to care - and I genuinely do.
- Your skin concerns and goals are MY concerns and goals, and I'm dedicated to finding what works and why, backed by science and clinical studies.

Now... let's take the girl out of the business (but we can't take the business out of the girl, right?). In my personal life, I'm a mother of a toddler and a dog mom of a sweet, (not-so) little pitbull, Daisy. I'm a Pilates princess, a barre babe, an artist and an inspiring yogi.
